Decisions on teacher discipline 'alarming': Education minister

Educator reviews.
Association claims process fair, transparent

Alberta's education minister says he's overruled "alarming" recommendations from a provincial teachers' union hearing committee four times in two years after the panel advised for varying suspensions of teachers guilty of incidences of fraud, as well as sexual relations and violence involving students.

But the Alberta Teachers' Association fired back, saying it's the first time an education minister has overturned recommended punishment in a teacher's disciplinary hearing in the organization's 82-year history.

Through a freedom of information request, Metro obtained details of cases where Alberta Education Minister Jeff Johnson went over the ATA's professional conduct committee and mandated a cancellation of a teacher's permanent professional certificate, effectively levying a lifetime classroom ban.

According to the documents, one case involved violence against students, another outlined multiple teacher-student sexual encounters involving intercourse and another case detailing explicit Internet conversations between a teacher and student.

In an interview Monday, Johnson said he recently decided to cancel the certificate of a fifth teacher guilty of fraud-related crimes, but Metro hadn't confirmed details at press time. He said he's only reviewed 14 cases that went before the hearing committee in his two years since taking the reins of the provincial education ministry, deeming it "alarming" that the penalty so often fell short.

"I don't think that they're doing a good enough job with respect to these.... In these cases that have come across my desk, the ones I've had to overturn, they are beyond a shadow of a doubt that these people should never be in the classroom again," he said.

The ATA's executive secretary, Gordon Thomas, questioned the minister's motives behind his recent decisions to overrule hearing committee recommendations.

Details of the cases follow recommendations from the provincial Task Force for Teaching Excellence, which aims to pull the responsibility of teacher discipline from the ATA's jurisdiction.

Signal Hill

Making a ruckus over bus noise

It wasn't until becoming a new mom that Melissa Ward recalls hearing the hydraulic whoosh of public transit buses pierce the walls of her Signal Hill home.

Only "small buses" served her street before the West LRT opened in December 2012.

But the new light-rail line boosted the size and frequency of bus service — and the level of street noise — outside her place on Sierra Morena Road SW.

"Our newborn baby is in the front of the house, so when we were redoing his bedroom we could hear the buses going by," Ward said.

Some of Ward's neighbours in the area have complained about the bus ruckus, prompting Calgary Transit to suggest service changes that would reverberate into neighbouring Strathcona, Springbank and the Westhills Shopping Centre.

The potential changes were pitched at an open house on Monday, with a second session planned for Tuesday from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the 69 Street Station.

At peak times, two-way routes No. 93 and 94 make 16 trips per hour in Signal Hill.

Senior transit planner Neil McKendrick noted the bus frequency isn't out of line with some northwest communities near established CTrain stations.

"It's really a trade-off," said McKendrick. "We try to spread the buses out as much as we can.... But we're trying to minimize travel time for the bus as well as the people on it."

Building gets stripped of bricks

The downtown Calgary building that has been shedding bricks onto the street below is now having its entire east wall stripped of bricks for both public safety as well as to aid in structural investigation.

The building began to drop bricks last Tuesday, prompting the closure of the area surrounding 608-7 Ave. SW.

On Sunday, more bricks fell from the highrise, crushing vehicles below and leaving a gaping hole in the building's shell.

"The public is not facing any danger at this time," said Marco Civitarese, the chief building official for the City of Calgary, although they're still not allowing people into the area.

An independent contractor, who was hired by the building's owner, is in charge of removing the bricks. That work was planned to start as early as Monday afternoon.

"The mitigation measures that are being undertaken right now include controlled demolition of the east facade to a point where it's fully removed," said Civitarese.

The rest of the walls on the building are believed to be structurally sound. What's caused the bricks to crumble and fall from the facade is still under investigation.

Zoo staff net bonuses despite cash-flow woes

Post-green. Director defends pay bump in spite of layoffs, pleas for public support

jeremy.nolaïs@metronews.ca

Nearly all eligible employees at the Calgary Zoo were recently awarded pay bonuses totalling up to five per cent of their salary despite the island attraction they work at falling short on financial targets in the wake of last year's flood, laying off hundreds of employees and openly lobbying for public dollars to ward off potential rushes of water in the future.

But Lindsey Galloway, the zoo's director of communications, marketing and sales, said the additional funds bestowed on employees were minuscule when compared with the projected $25 million needed to insulate the zoo from future flood threats.

By the numbers

123

Overall, 123 Calgary Zoo employees received pay bumps of up to five per cent.

He said that a discussion was held last winter on whether the "variable pay" offered to employees in late April and early May could have been used to re-hire some staff positions, but said ultimately it was felt the best use was to reward those that he says saved the animals as well as helped with rebuilding and reopening.

"In the end, it came down to do you treat your employees fairly when they've made such an extraordinary contribution, and they are kind of the survivors who stayed behind to rebuild the zoo. We thought it was the right thing to do for those people."

Galloway said the total lump sum paid out for the bonuses as well as specifics on what each employee received are confidential.

However, Derek Fildebrandt of the Canadian Taxpayers Federation didn't buy that the added funds should be confidential, given that 20 per cent of the attraction's funding comes from the City of Calgary.

"We have no issue with the bonuses as long as they're reasonable and transparent, and for that we need disclosure," he said.

More plain folks but less cash for city art

Council votes. More radical motions from Coun. Chu narrowly then soundly defeated

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Calgary will reduce the amount of money it spends on public art and include more "ordinary" citizens in the decision-making process under policy changes approved Monday.

Gone is the straight "one per cent" allocation — which set aside for public art one dollar of every $100 in capital spending on major projects — in favour of a "sliding scale" with two "break points."

Now, one per cent will be set aside from the first $50 million of a project's price tag, and then 0.5 per cent of the amount above $50 million, up

Money well spent?

"The New York Times says visit Calgary for its public realm, visit Calgary for its public art."

Coun. Brian Pincott on the value of public art, citing it as the reason for Calgary's inclusion on a recent list of "52 places to go in 2014" to a maximum of $4 million per project.

The changes passed by a 12-2 vote, with Coun. Sean Chu and Coun. Brian Pincott opposing them for opposite reasons.

Chu wanted to restrict the funding even further, making the cutoff point $25 million instead of $50 million.

That idea was rejected by a 7-7 vote (ties count as defeats at city council). Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart was not present for the vote, having left earlier in the day, citing illness.

Chu also proposed reducing the cap to $2 million per project and creating an on-line voting system where the public could be the ultimate arbiters of which projects get the green light, but both suggestions were shot down by 13-1 votes.

"We have trouble getting Calgarians out to elect us, let alone to vote on public art," said Coun. Evan Woolley, adding that the public art process engages with the community in other ways.

Selection juries for art projects will now be expanded to seven members, including three from the general public. Previously, there was typically one public member on a five-person jury.

Coun. Pincott said he couldn't support reducing funding for public art, which he said "adds to our city."

Candidates pitch change to school funding model

Thomas Lukaszuk METRO FILE

Tory race. Lukaszuk wants to treat facilities in same manner as mortgaged homes

A former education minister and deputy premier seeking the Tory leadership crown says he's not confident a slate of new schools will open on time and long-term financing may be the best option to cut down on a major facility backlog.

Thomas Lukaszuk first pitched the concept of amortizing the cost of a school and writing off the depreciation — much like one would with a home mortgage — in 2012 while serving as Alberta's top education official. At the time he pledged to construct 400 new schools in a decade, but now he says he's not confident even the 19 schools the province has pledged to open by September 2016 will be ready.

Currently none of the school projects have broken ground, and only one consortium — Calgary's Gracorp Capital and Graham — has applied to build them using the public-private-partnership approach.

Lukaszuk deemed that concerning in an interview.

"We have to review whether there isn't a way to rewrite the financing on those schools and generate more excitement among our developers, our builders, our construction companies to take those jobs on," he said.

"There's nothing wrong with having developers working closely in collaboration with school boards and putting schools in as the first piece of infrastructure that goes into a neighbourhood."

Leadership rival Jim Prentice had already pledged publicly to borrow to fund vital public infrastructure, including schools, with the aim of repaying those costs within 15 to 20 years. He reiterated his plan when reached Monday.

"To the extent possible, we will use savings that we've accumulated," Prentice said. "But there's not a mattress big enough to have the $15 (billion) to $20 billion underneath it that's needed to do this. The point is we will have to build these facilities and we may have to access debt markets for a portion of the financing."

Calgary approves plan to draw more bottle depots

More bottle depots could soon be coming to Calgary now that council has approved a plan to make it easier for the facilities to open up shop.

The move, aimed at boosting Calgary's lagging rate of beverage-container recycling, came with a condition — that city staff work with the Alberta Beverage Container Management Board (BCMB) to address community concerns about facilities that neighbours find stinky, noisy or unsightly.

Coun. Richard Pootmans pressed for that caveat, citing long-standing concerns with bottle depots in his ward that "BCMB has been unable to address."

Calgary currently has 23 bottle depots but could accommodate up to 29, according to a report.

Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart has watered down a proposal that would limit the number of pets Calgarians can own and also postponed council's consideration of it until next month. ## Smartphone alerts. Province launches flood app to keep you in the loop Albertans now have information about rivers and flooding at their fingertips thanks to a new app the provincial government launched Monday.

The app displays river levels, flood advisories and information on stream flows and rainfall.

"Creating this app is just one of the many actions we are taking as a government to ensure that people have the tools and information they need when they need it most — especially in emergency situations," said Robin Campbell, minister of environment and sustainable resource development.

The province also has an emergency-alert app and a wildfire app. METRO

BRYAN WEISMILLER

For the second time in two weeks, thieves have ransacked a southeast gun store and shooting range.

In the latest case, crooks made off with 20 firearms when The Shooting Edge Inc. was hit Monday, police say.

Owner JR Cox said he's "horrified" that guns from his shop are ending up on Calgary streets.

"It's embarrassing that such a thing would happen," he said in an interview. "And I'm angry, too, because this embarrassment is brought on. We've been victimized."

Cox maintained his business "far exceeds" industry standards, noting he's shelled out more than $150,000 for a multi-layered security system that includes bollards, special windows and at least 55 high-definition cameras.

Investigators are trying to determine how the two heists are related.

On May 11, investigators say a man forced his way through the front door of the Shooting Edge store and used a baseball bat to smash open the display case.

Eleven handguns were declared stolen in that case.

Cox, meanwhile, was keen to defend his employees.

"We're quite confident it's not an inside job," he said, adding an "external team" is likely behind the thefts.

Staff Sgt. Mark Rahn of the police's General Investigation Section said it doesn't matter how well the security system was designed.

Online census for 2015 approved

Calgarians will be able to submit municipal census information online next year, provided everything goes according to a plan approved Monday.

Residents who submit household information online won't have census-takers come to their homes, reducing the door-to-door workload by as much as 30 per cent, according to Mayor Naheed Nenshi's estimates.

"It should save a lot of operational money for a little bit of upfront money," Nenshi said.

Shattered glass at bus shelters in northeast Calgary is a growing problem, says an area councillor who wants the city to look at new materials for the structures.

"We have some in our city that are probably hit more often than others," Coun. Andre Chabot said Monday, citing Madigan Drive NE as one area of particular concern.

Transportation general manager Mac Logan acknowledged the issue but said it's not isolated to Chabot's ward.

Logan said the city moved away from more shatter-resist-

Kootenay National Park. Bear brigades raise alarm

Mother bears and their cubs roaming around sections of Kootenay National Park have prompted officials to close certain sections to public access and remind visitors to give the wild animals a wide berth.

The Olive Lake day-use area and southbound brake check have been closed for the time being, and bear warnings have been issued for Redstreak Campground, Cobb Lake Trail and the Olive Lake northbound brake check.

Brianna Burley, a human-wildlife conflict specialist, said a mother grizzly and her cubs are of particular concern in those areas.

"She's foraging and feeding really near to the highway and she's using a lot of the pullout areas and brake checks and whatnot to access these green spaces," Burley said.

A black bear and her cubs also pose a concern in the area, Burley added, as do a number of individual bears.

Park officials are asking visitors to keep their distance from any bears they see and to refrain from pulling over on the highway to take photos.

Escape, hide, fight — that's the key message in a new safety video informing Alberta post-secondary students and staff how to respond during a shooting rampage.

The Shooter on Campus video was released Monday as a joint effort produced by a group of Alberta universities, polytechnic institutes and colleges.

said Atkinson. "Violence in public places is a reality in the world in which we live today."

The video, which was filmed in Edmonton, portrays a mock scenario in which a gunman enters a university campus and students and staff take action to protect themselves.

Philip Stack, associate vice-president of risk management at the University of Alberta, said the video is meant to empower people.

"There are those who might consider this video launch a bad-news story," he said. "I think it's a good-news story because it reminds us there are things we can do to keep ourselves safe no matter where we are."

Lawsuit. Woman alleges RCMP officers pulled her from shower, left her nude

A Manitoba woman is suing six RCMP officers, claiming they pulled her from a shower and left her shivering and naked in her kitchen during a search of her home.

The woman alleges in a lawsuit filed last week that the September 2012 incident has left her with post-traumatic stress disorder, fear of being alone and a fear of showering, as well as emotional trauma.

The lawsuit alleges the woman was taken from her main-floor bathroom shower during the mid-morning raid and kept in custody, without any clothing, in the kitchen while police searched her home.

"The plaintiff was kept in the kitchen without access to covers for a period of time," the statement of claim says. "The plaintiff began hyperventilating and experiencing shock-like symptoms."

It claims the woman, who works as a hospital medical technician, was eventually taken to hospital in an ambulance. She is seeking unspecified damages, including punitive damages and costs.

"As a result of the injuries which the plaintiff received from the defendants, the plaintiff has suffered out-of-pocket expenses including loss of wages in an amount to be proven at trial," the lawsuit says.

The lawsuit says Mounties raided the house while executing a search warrant as part of an investigation, but does not elaborate. Daniel Minuk, the woman's lawyer, declined to comment on the lawsuit or its allegations.

Tara Seel, media relations officer with the RCMP, said it would be inappropriate to comment since the matter is now before the courts.

Chief of defence claims military knows location of kidnapped schoolgirls

Abuja, Nigeria. Military official won't elaborate on location of students, suggests using force to rescue them will result in their deaths

Nigeria's military has located nearly 300 schoolgirls abducted by Islamic extremist group Boko Haram, but fears using force to try to free them could get them killed, the country's chief of defence said Monday.

Air Marshal Alex Barde told demonstrators that Nigerian troops can save the girls. But he added, "We can't go and kill our girls in the name of trying to get them back."

He spoke to thousands of demonstrators who marched to Defence Ministry headquarters in Abuja, the capital. Many were brought in on buses, indicating it was an organized event.

Asked by reporters where they had found the girls, Barde refused to elaborate.

"We want our girls back. I can tell you we can do it. Our military can do it. But where they are held, can we go with force?" he asked the crowd.

People roared back, "No!" "If we go with force what will happen?" he asked.

"They will die," the demonstrators said.

"Nobody should come and say the Nigerian military does not know what it is doing. We know what we are doing," Barde insisted.

Nigeria's military and government have faced national and international outrage over their failure to rescue the girls seized by Boko Haram militants from a remote northeastern school six weeks ago.

Thai coup leader warns citizens against protests

Royal endorsement.

Thailand's king endorsed its military chief to run the country and called for 'reconciliation'

Bolstered by an endorsement from Thailand's king, the nation's new military ruler issued a stark warning Monday to anyone opposed to last week's coup: Don't cause trouble, don't criticize, don't protest — or else the nation could revert to the "old days" of turmoil and street violence.

Gen. Prayuth Chan-ocha defended the army's takeover, saying he had to restore order after seven months of increasingly violent confrontations between the now-ousted government and demonstrators.

"Everyone must help me," said Prayuth, adding: "Do not criticize, do not create new problems. It's no use."

The words came as an aide to former prime minister Yingluck Shinawatra said she had been released Monday from military custody after being held for three days.

Earlier Monday, a royal command sent in the name of King Bhumibol Adulyadej officially endorsed Prayuth to run the country and called for "reconciliation among the people."

The endorsement is a formality, but in a country where the king's word is supreme, it is one that carries enormous weight. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fatal train collision in India kills 40

Officials and rescuers stand near the wreckage after the Gorakhpur Express passenger train slammed into a parked freight train near Basti, in India's Uttar Pradesh state, on Monday. The express train plowed into a parked freight train, killing at least 40 people and reducing cars to heaps of torn and twisted metal, officials said. Six of the cars on the express train derailed, with one car accounting for most of the deaths, police said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don't hold your breath

Man faints while driving through tunnel, injures four people in crash

Police say a 19-year-old man caused a three-car crash when he fainted while holding his breath as he drove through a tunnel in Oregon.

According to a news release, Daniel J. Calhon told investigators he fainted Sunday afternoon while holding his breath in the Highway 26 tunnel near the community of Manning.

His car, a 1990 Toyota Camry, drifted across the centre line and crashed head-on with a Ford Explorer.

Both vehicles struck the tunnel walls before a pickup hit the Camry.

Four people suffered non-life-threatening injuries.

Police say Calhon has been cited for reckless driving, three counts of reckless endangerment and fourth-degree assault.

Some people hold their breaths in tunnels as part of a game or superstition.

London mayor. Joe Fontana pleads not guilty to 3 fraud charges

The mayor of London, Ont., admits that as a member of Parliament he altered a contract that he submitted for expenses, but the $1,700 the government paid out was not for his son's wedding, his lawyer said Monday.

Joe Fontana, who has refused to step down as mayor while his case is before the courts, pleaded not guilty to fraud, uttering a forged document and breach of trust by a public official on the first day of his trial.

The Crown alleges Fontana wrote a $1,700 cheque as a deposit for his son's 2005 wedding reception at the Marconi Club in London then submitted a claim for a government expenses along with a "significantly altered" version of the contract that secured the club as the wedding venue.

Among the alterations were changing the date of the event from June 25, 2005, to Feb. 25, 2004, the word "wedding" to "reception" on the contract under the section for purpose of the event, the addition of a yellow sticky note saying "misc constituents reception" as well as the word "original" added in blue ink.

Fontana's lawyer, Gord Cudmore, said his client admits making those changes, but what is at issue in the trial is the purpose of the $1,700 cheque.

"You will find in the course of the evidence called it is the position of the defence that the cheque had nothing whatsoever to do with the wedding." THE CANADIAN PRESS

European Parliament election. Euroskeptic rise muddles EU future

Euroskeptics celebrated across the continent on Monday, from Britain to France and beyond, over their unmatched success in the European Parliament election. Now they are keen to put up internal borders again, keep foreigners out of their labour markets, abolish the common euro currency and let their nations go it alone in a globalized world.

The 28 European Union leaders meeting in Tuesday's postelection summit have a different task: making sure the surge of anti-EU and anti-establishment parties that claimed almost 30 per cent of the EU's 751-seat legislature doesn't dislodge the 64-year project of closer co-operation between European nations.

They will also need to look for a way to reconnect with an ever more disenchanted European electorate that stayed away from the polls in massive numbers — and cast plenty of protest votes when they did show up.

Trust in political leadership "is going down dramatically," EU Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso acknowledged Monday in Sintra, Portugal.

British Prime Minister David Cameron, faced with the rise of the Euroskeptic UK Independence Party at home, struck a similar note, saying nothing will be business-as-usual any more.

"People are deeply disillusioned with the European Union," Cameron said Monday after Nigel Farage's UKIP came out on top in Britain and was slated to win 24 EU seats, compared to 19 for Cameron's Conservatives.

The British leader who has been calling on the EU to drastically reform its ways and institutions to give member nations more space to run their own affairs will be a key figure at Tuesday's summit.

Voters "want change and as far as I am concerned that message is completely received and understood," Cameron said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope Francis wrapped up his Mideast pilgrimage Monday with a balancing act of symbolic and spontaneous gestures to press his call for peace between Israel and the Palestinians and friendship between Jews and Muslims in the land of Jesus' birth.

No apology from Harper

Muslim group's lawsuit against PMO proceeding

A national Muslim organization is proceeding with a lawsuit against Prime Minister Stephen Harper and his chief spokesman for a comment it says linked the organization to a terrorist group.

The National Council of Canadian Muslims is filing a statement of claim in Ontario Superior Court after failing to get an apology from the Prime Minister's Office for the January remark.

The council took its first legal step in January by filing a notice of libel that quotes Harper spokesman Jason MacDonald as saying, "We will not take seriously criticism from an organization with documented ties to a terrorist organization such as Hamas."

Baird says Turks and Caicos dream will remain just that

No 11th province.

Though islands' premier says he's not closing the door on joining Canada, Foreign Affairs says it's not in the cards

The premier of Turks and Caicos is leaving the door open to the prospect of his country joining Canada, even though he has opposed the idea in the past.

But Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird suggested Monday that Canadians are dreaming if they think they'll have a province in the Caribbean any time soon.

Turks and Caicos Premier Rufus Ewing met Prime Minister Stephen Harper in Ottawa, where he says the two leaders spoke about exploring a more formal relationship.

Ewing described the meeting as a "courtship," but said the pair did not discuss the possibility of Turks and Caicos

"We're not in the business of annexing islands in the Caribbean to be part of Canada, so that's not something that we're exploring."

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird

Island aspirations

The notion of annexing Turks and Caicos dates back to Borden's era.

- 1917: Canadian Prime Minister Sir Robert Borden explores the idea of annexing the islands. Britain says no.
- 1974: Canadian New Democrat Max Saltzman introduces a private member's bill to annex the islands. It failed.

- 2004: The Nova Scotia legislature passes a motion calling for negotiations to make the islands a part of Nova Scotia.
- 2014: Conservative MP Peter Goldring persists in his efforts to link Canada and the islands.

becoming Canada's 11th province.

The idea, however, is not out of the question, Ewing suggested during a news conference following the meeting.

"It is not of my mandate to close the door," he said.

"It is my mandate to see Turks and Caicos have sustainable economic growth and development and development of our people ... and we look to Canada, who has shown by example of being a very strong democracy."

Even creating closer ties is a long shot, said Baird: The Harper government is not exploring a stronger relationship, let alone considering a plan to annex the British colonial territory.

"We're not in the business of annexing islands in the Caribbean to be part of Canada, so that's not something that we're exploring," said Baird.

"We're not looking at any sort of formal association with the islands."

Some provinces, however, appear open to the idea. While Ewing was in Ottawa, P.E.I. Premier Robert Ghiz tweeted to Saskatchewan Premier Brad Wall that he'd be happy to partner with the Prairie province on the Turks and Caicos project.

Conservative MP Peter Goldring has been pushing the idea for more than a decade.

Canada enjoyed strong economic ties with Turks and Caicos in the 1800s, largely through the salt trade.

More recently, however, the 40-island nation has relied more on the tourist trade and its open banking system for the economic well-being of its roughly 30,000 inhabitants.

Turks and Caicos is currently a British territory with an elected legislature.

Ukraine's new leader vows to open dialogue with restive east

More conflict. Kyiv launches airstrike after rebels occupy airport

Ukraine's president-elect said Monday he wants to begin talks with Moscow and end a pro-Russia insurgency in the east, but the rebels escalated the conflict by occupying a major airport, and the government in Kyiv responded with an airstrike.

As darkness fell in Donetsk, a city of about one million in eastern Ukraine, it was unclear who was in control of the airport. Hundreds of fighters of the separatist Donetsk People's Republic had been brought by trucks to a wooded area on the fringes of the airport, many of them armed with rocket-propelled grenade launchers and automatic rifles. At least one warplane streaked over the city, firing flares, and explosions were heard from the direction of the airport.

Early Tuesday, the DPR said on its Twitter account that a truck carrying wounded from the airport area came under fire and that the driver was killed.

The rebels, who declared independence for Donetsk and the neighbouring Luhansk region after a hastily called and dubious referendum two weeks ago, regarded Sunday's election of candy tycoon Petro Poroshenko as president to be illegitimate.

In a victory speech, the billionaire promised to open a dialogue with residents of eastern Ukraine and to guarantee their rights. The rebels and many others in the region say they fear the February ouster of pro-Moscow president Viktor Yanukovich will lead to the repression of its predominantly Russian-speaking population by Ukrainian nationalists.

Poroshenko also said he would not negotiate with armed insurgents that he calls terrorists.

Russia has heavily criticized an offensive by Ukraine's military against the rebels, and Poroshenko indicated he wants it to end quickly.

"The anti-terrorist operation cannot and should not last two or three months," he said. "It should and will last hours."

'Genuine election'

Sunday's presidential balloting was praised by international observers as a "genuine election," saying it was held freely and fairly.

- Poroshenko, known for his pragmatism, supports building strong ties with Europe but also has stressed the importance of mending relations with Moscow.

- Russia denies allegations that it supports or directs the insurgents. But Russia is pushing for Ukraine to decentralize its government, which would give more power to the regions including the east, and wants Kyiv to withdraw its troops from the area.

Gunmen kill anti-Islamist journalist in Benghazi

Gunmen shot dead a newspaper editor who was an outspoken critic of Islamists in Libya's volatile east on Monday, in a targeted killing that came hours after he warned the Islamist-led parliament of a civil war if it didn't bow to widespread demands to disband and allow early elections.

Libya is deeply polarized, with a renegade general having launched an armed campaign against Islamists, who dominate the elected parliament and who on Sunday approved a new prime minister days after thousands held demonstrations demanding the assembly halt sessions. The demonstrators also accused it of financing Islamist militias.

A security official said the 50-year-old Moftah Abu Zeid, chief editor of the Brnieq newspaper, was attacked while driving down a main street in the eastern city of Benghazi.

Egyptians vote for new president as ex-military chief hopes for landslide

Egypt's presidential election on Monday turned into a nationalist celebration at many polls with voters singing and dancing for the almost certain winner — former military chief Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi, who last year ousted the first freely elected president.

But the first day of voting in the two-day election also illustrated the bitter divisions that have riven Egypt since the military's removal of Islamist leader Mohammed Morsi. In towns where Islamists dominate, voting was often thin or non-existent.

The 59-year-old retired Field Marshal el-Sissi is looking for more than a landslide victory from the election. He's hoping for a strong turnout to show international critics that his July 3 ouster of Morsi reflected the will of the people — and to claim popular support as he tries to tackle Egypt's daunting economic woes.

For 10 months, el-Sissi has had the institutions of state and nearly all of Egypt's media behind him, whipping up a pro-military jingoism and depicting him as the sole figure who can rescue the country. After polls closed Monday, the prime minister declared Tuesday a holiday for government employees to allow them to go to the polls, in a push for greater numbers.

When Ann Lawson strolls into her neighbourhood grocery store, she really gets a workout.

That's because her Hannaford supermarket has a small gym located just past the pharmacy counter. It has treadmills, stationary bicycles, various other cardio machines, even a state-of-the-art Zumba room with a shiny wooden floor.

And best of all, it's free.

"It's about me getting healthy and losing some of this excess weight," Lawson said.

"And I like the idea of being able to work out and shop in one trip."

Maine-based Hannaford insists the 5,600-square-foot health facility that opened in October is not part of some shrewd marketing campaign. The Albany, N.Y., store is the only one in the 184-store chain with such a gym, and there are no plans for more.

The idea grew out of a meeting last summer between Hannaford, the local YMCA and the health-care provider Capital District Physicians' Health Plan. All said their goal was to come up with something to improve the area's health while also being convenient, accessible and free. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUT WHICH BRO ARE YOU, BRO?

The world of online dating is a wondrous novelty to me. I'm not sure if I would have ended up with my own significant other — whom I met unromantically, at a bar — if I had relied on a digital matchmaking service that allows you to filter potential partners by age, race, religion, geography, height, body type and annual income.

Sophisticated algorithms might help users narrow down their search, but we all know that a carefully selected profile photo can make or break your chances of finding a date. Some sites such as Match.com and eHarmony allow users to post an entire catalogue of images, while popular matchmaking app Tinder limits users to just five well-chosen snapshots.

I spent the weekend scrolling through profiles on various digital dating services with a few of my single girlfriends — in the name of research, of course — to find out what influences a woman's decision to swipe right and say yes to a date. In the course of this exceedingly important investigation, I discovered there are numerous things that make women cringe when it comes to first-impression photos.

SHE SAYS
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

The top five things all the single ladies really don't want to see on your profile:

- Your ex: It's perplexing to see how many men think posting a romantic vacation photo with their ex-girlfriend might help them snag a date. I don't care if you look incredibly handsome in that picture in front of the Eiffel Tower; coupled-up images suggest you are still invested in your previous relationship or have absolutely no idea how to upload new content to the Internet.
- Group shots: We get it, you love your bros. You have so many bros, but which bro are you, bro? Dating websites feature thousands of men; your individual profile should be about you and not your posse of pals. Stick to solo images to avoid confusion.

• Photos of your stuff: Most women aren't looking to date your motorcycle or your dog and if they are, well they probably still want to see YOU posing with your prized possessions. Uploading standalone images of your condo interior won't help you turn that bachelor pad into a love nest any time soon.

• Bicep snaps: It can be hard to find a good collection of recent pictures of yourself, but please stop with the not-so-discrete snapshots of you flexing at the gym. According to a survey by dating website Zoosk, a man is 19 per cent more likely to receive a message from a woman if he posts an image of himself doing something outdoors. So step away from the mirror and get outside.

• Archival images: It doesn't take a detective to figure out that a 36-year-old man who uploads a snapshot of himself doing a keg stand at a frat party might be stuck in the past. Remember that you're looking for someone to date you, not "20 pounds ago and with way more hair" you. Avoid disappointment by being honest with yourself and potential love interests.

Cubs make their grand entrance

A litter of rare tigers made their debut at a zoo in Austria.

According to the zoo, it's the first time five white tiger cubs were born in a single litter in Europe. The four female and one male are all healthy and doing well.

"We are very, very proud and very happy, because they are totally normal, there is nothing wrong (with them)," said zoo director Herbert Eder. WPTV.COM

Rare beauty makes them targets

The cubs' mother, named Burani, was brought to the zoo from Germany three years ago and this is her third litter.

The father, named Samir, has fathered 14 cubs.

Eder says, "They are not hand-tamed, and not together with people; they are together with their mother."

The white tigers' unique colour means they're targeted by poachers and nearly extinct in the wild. WPTV.COM

By the numbers

500

There are only a small quantity of white tigers in existence and the current population is estimated at approximately 500. With the inevitable inbreeding problems, a debate continually rages over the wisdom of breeding this animal.

Charlize Theron risks it all for a Million Ways to Die

Wild, wild western.

The Oscar winner risked life and limb to bring Seth MacFarlane's spoof A Million Ways to Die in the West to life, but was it worth it?

Metro World News in Hollywood

While you might think Seth MacFarlane had to chase down Charlize Theron to convince her to co-star in his cowboy comedy, A Million Ways to Die in the West, the Oscar-winning actress insists it was the other way around.

"I got to read this pretty early on," she says of the script for the film, which skewers old-fashioned westerns and life on the frontier.

"Just the idea of doing something that's pitched in this very unusual way of a comedy-western situation and him at the helm of that, that to me was very intriguing. So I definitely did some chasing."

But a few weeks on location in New Mexico, risking life and limb, quickly had Theron rethinking her decision.

Storm's a brewin'

"I felt like it was like biblical times, and we were all going to die a horrible death by weather."

Charlize Theron, actress, on weather issues while filming in New Mexico

Anna (Charlize Theron) and Albert (Seth MacFarlane) try not to die at the fair in A Million Ways to Die in the West, the new comedy from director, producer and co-writer MacFarlane. UNIVERSAL PICTURES

"Look, it's a gorgeous place. I understand why you want to paint it. I would want to paint it. I don't necessarily want to go and shoot in it again. It's just like the weather was unbelievable. I felt like it was like biblical times, and we were all going to die a horrible death by weather," she says. "I mean, there was a night where we shot, and Seth left before me. I got a text from him that literally just said, 'The road is washing away! Get out of your trailer right now and start driving!' And I was like, 'I'm going to die on this movie.'"

Of course, all that risking life and limb can help bring a cast together, and Theron is particularly fond of her co-stars on this one, including MacFarlane, Neil Patrick Harris, Giovanni Ribisi, Sarah Silverman and Amanda Seyfried.

"There really wasn't a bad apple in the bunch. It really was just a bunch of great people together having fun, working hard, there for the right reasons, wanting to make the movie the best they possibly could," Theron says. "We laughed a lot, and drank a lot, and almost died together a lot. So we are bonded for life."

One particular co-star does stand out: Taken star Liam Neeson, who plays villainous outlaw Clinch Leatherwood.

"I think all of us were a little star-struck," she admits. "There was definitely that [whispering], 'Liam's here. Yeah?' 'I saw a car by his trailer.' 'Is he here?' 'Is he coming to set?' 'Wow.' Like, trying to be cool when I met first him. There's something about him. He is not just the one-dimensional actor, no matter what he does. And I think that's why people are so endeared by him and why you emotionally tap into him, no matter what he plays. And he plays the baddie in this so convincingly, but there's a realness about him. He's not putting it on. It's always coming from a place of understanding and empathy. It's not plastered or mechanical."

Super Duper Alice Cooper

Directors. Reginald Harkema, Scot McFadyen, Sam Dunn

Stars. Alice Cooper

• • • • •

Fans of original shock rocker Alice Cooper, well served by this loving chronicle by Reginald Harkema, Scot McFadyen and Sam Dunn, may be surprised to learn that the frontman didn't strut fully formed out of a 1970s gateway from hell.

First he was art nerd Vince Furnier, a preacher's son from Arizona, who got his stage name from a Ouija board, band outfits from the Ice Capades and attitude from a "moral compass" that could also point to the dark side.

The doc's funniest moments chronicle his early days, including his performance epiphany in Detroit, his actual birthplace, where he feels audiences first really got his band's blend of music and Grand Guignol theatre: garish eye makeup, faked onstage executions (with a realistic guillotine and hangman's noose), dead baby dolls and other plastic cadavers strewn about.

You'll laugh, you'll cry, but oh you billion dollar babies, you'll rawk.

Extras include deleted scenes and rarely seen concert footage. PETER HOWELL

Watch Dogs. Anticipated hacker-hero video game to be released

Hacker-themed video game Watch Dogs makes its hotly anticipated debut on Tuesday in a world grappling with real-life fears about privacy in the Internet era.

France-based Ubisoft's new title features a protagonist who controls the world around him by hacking into systems and has generated intense buzz for eerie parallels with the storm about U.S. surveillance.

In Watch Dogs, the player-controlled antihero can access everything from the cellphone conversations and medical records of passersby to computers which control traffic lights, to advance through the game. Set in Chicago, the game centres on Aiden Pearce, who uses his smartphone to access the city's Central Operating System, which controls everything from power grids and traffic management technology to bank accounts and phone networks.

Pearce starts off seeking revenge for a loved one, but as he finds out more about the city, through hacking into its systems and inhabitants, he becomes a "vigilante," according to Montreal-based Canadian Ubisoft developer Dominic Guay.

Versions of Watch Dogs have been tailored for play on Sony's new-generation PlayStation 4 and Microsoft's Xbox One as well as the previous generation of those consoles. The game can also be played on computers powered by Windows software.

Ubisoft added the ability for people playing Watch Dogs on consoles to take on in-game challenges from friends using a companion application on smartphones or tablets. AFP

Global box office

Frozen becomes fifth highest-grossing film in box office history

Since its release in November 2013, Disney's seasonal animated feature Frozen has brought in over $1.219 billion at theatres worldwide, placing it ahead of Iron Man 3 in the ranking of the most lucrative global blockbusters. Iron Man 3 grossed $1.215 billion during its run in theatres.

At the top of the worldwide box-office podium are Avatar ($2.7 billion), Titanic ($1.8 billion), The Avengers ($1.5 billion) and Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 ($1.3 billion). AFP

A lighter shade of Lana

Lana Del Rey has just released the second single from her new album Ultraviolence, which is slated for release on June 16. The breathy single, Shades of Cool, was written by Rick Nowels, with whom the singer collaborated on the tracks Summertime Sadness and Young and Beautiful from her previous album. Ultraviolence was produced by Black Keys singer Dan Auerbach. "We bumped heads a little bit," Auerbach confided in the magazine MOJO. "But at the end of the day we were dancing to the songs." AFP

Japan. Saw-wielding man attacks members of pop group

Japan's hugely popular female pop group AKB48 cancelled fan events Monday after a saw-wielding man attacked two members and a staffer, shocking the nation and raising questions over security.

The two group members, Anna Iriyama, 18, and Rina Kawaei, 19, suffered hand and head injuries, and the male staffer who tried to stop the attack Sunday at a fan event in northern Japan had cuts on his hand. All three left the hospital by late Monday.

The women, wearing hats and covering their hands with white towels, appeared in front of a huge crowd of reporters outside the hospital and thanked fans for their concern.

"We've caused you worry, but we are returning to Tokyo now," Kawaei said. "Thank you very much."

The attack on the group, whose members are dubbed "idols you can meet" because of their fan events, has rattled people in a nation known for public safety. The news topped TV entertainment shows and even the two nationwide newspapers Yomiuri and Mainichi.

On Sunday, the group gave a mini-concert for hundreds of fans in Takizawa city which was followed by a handshaking event, in which fans who buy special CDs can shake hands and chat briefly with their favourite member. As soon as the handshaking event started, a man took a foldable saw from his jacket and went toward the two women, who were standing at the entrance of one of several tents set up inside a gymnasium.

Police arrested Satoru Umeta, a 24-year-old unemployed man, on suspicion of attempted murder.

Iwate prefectural police official Takahiro Fujibayashi said Umeta told investigators that he was not an AKB48 fan and just wanted to commit random murder. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Ellen Page's dream man is the Biebs!?

Ellen Page has been having some weird dreams, she tells Conan O'Brien during an interview. "My anxiety dreams tend to always relate to pubic hair," Page says. "So I'll be, like, on stage getting ready to act, and I'm just in my underwear, and I just look down and it might as well be an old man's beard or something. Or I'll be topless and it will be up to my (chest). Like a reverse hairy chest." But her dreams haven't all been anxiety-inducing. For instance, there was one about Justin Bieber that she actually enjoyed. "We were in his, like, childhood home in Canada, just hanging out, and his mom came home with takeout from Ikea, and we were like, 'Yeah!'" Page explains. "We were stoked. We were like, 'Yes, our favourite!'" For the record, Page has never actually met Bieber.

Franco, my dear, perhaps your dates don't give a tweet

Dating didn't apparently come easy to James Franco, as the Palo Alto star admits high school was a bit rough. "I wasn't the best socializer," Franco says. "I was shy, but I had a girlfriend named Jasmine my last two years. I was lucky to have someone who stuck around like that. I was a little confused and mixed up when it came to dating." And when it comes to dating today, with the help of social media and mobile technology?

"You get to know someone much quicker," he says. "The downside is when people aren't tech savvy and don't express themselves well through digital media." So get with the tweeting, ladies.

Cork resort can't comment on Kim and Kanye's country canoodling

Kanye West and Kim Kardashian

When it comes to all things West-Kardashian, perhaps you empathize with the item entitled "Alert (yawn): Kimye weds" that just appeared in the New York Post. "Two jackasses got married in Italy Saturday," the piece declared.

On the other hand, perhaps you'd really like to know where the couple is honeymooning. According to The Daily Mail, the pair landed at Cork airport in their private jet Sunday and drove off in "a fleet of limousines." They're apparently going to stay in Ireland for five days, and are "rumoured to be staying at the luxurious five-star Castlemartyr Resort — a half-hour drive east of Cork city. Castlemartyr staff said they 'could not comment' on whether it was Kanye who booked the Presidential suite of the 17th-century country manor."

Acupuncture is based on the theory that essential life energy, called Qi, flows through the body along channels called meridians. Each meridian is connected to a specific internal organ. When the flow of Qi is blocked or out of balance, illness or pain results. Needling specific acupoint combinations which are calculated according to the patient's condition can not only relieve pain but amplify and redistribute energy in the body, eliminating disease.

Calling all hungry girls

Lisa Lillien — known to her legions of followers as Hungry Girl — didn't set out to create a diet when she started the Hungry Girl empire, which has spawned cookbooks, a TV show and even a mega-office in LA dubbed HungryLand.

But she found the questions she kept getting from fans were about putting her ideas — recipes, food swaps or living tips — into action.

She consulted nutritionist David Grotto to come up with The Hungry Girl Diet, a four-week plan that promises "big portions [and] big results." Here's what we learned about the diet when we chatted up the foodie maven.

It's whole-foods based

Lillien's recipes sometimes call for artificial sweeteners or packaged foods, but the basis of her diet plan is about eating clean. "There are so many ingredients that I use that are all-natural, that are

Lillien's book incorporates a health approach you can use forever. ISTOCK clean and still are perfectly aligned with what my brand is about, so I wanted to focus on those for this particular book," she says.

You're encouraged to dig in
"I took the time to find ingredients that you can eat a lot of, that give you large volumes of food that are extremely satisfying," Lillien says. "You won't be hungry on the diet."

It has rules you can live by

This isn't a diet with a start and stop date. These are healthy-eating rules you can incorporate into your life. "People who have 20, 30, 50, 100 pounds to lose, they were repeating the plan and taking from it whatever they want, and they continue doing it," Lillien says.

Plus: Make her favourite breakfast

When she's short on time, Lillien loves Greek yogurt with sliced red grapes, almonds and high-fibre cereal. But when she's in the mood to cook breakfast, growing oatmeal bowls are often her dish of choice.

Fitness trainers stress the importance of varying your workout routine to get better results. The same holds true for your diet. By swapping your favourite healthy foods for new choices, you could reap the rewards even wider array of vital nutrients for a healthier body. In the latest issue of Best Health, Canada's healthy lifestyle magazine for women, registered dietitian Matthew Kadey found some inspiring alternatives to shake up your daily meals.

Like green tea?

Try matcha. It is made by lightly steaming tea leaves, air-drying them and then stone-grinding them into a fine green powder. Matcha's been billed as more powerful than regular green tea because you are consuming the entire leaf instead of steeping the leaves and then discarding them. You benefit from a huge dose of green tea's age-avenging antioxidants. A 2003 University of Colorado study found matcha contains up to 137 times more antioxidants than traditional green tea.

Like whole-wheat flour?

Try almond flour. Among the growing legion of gluten-free choices, it outdoes whole-wheat flour in several areas, including having nearly 50 times as much heart-healthy mono-unsaturated fat, about 33 per cent more protein and seven times higher levels of vitamin E (this antioxidant has been linked to better brain functioning and improved hearing).

Like baked potato chips?

Try baked sweet potato chips. These are several times richer in beta-carotene than their potato counterparts. Studies show beta-carotene can help lower the risk of uterus and breast cancers. Scientists believe it behaves as an antioxidant, helping to prevent cell damage that can spiral into cancer. Sweet-potato chips will also give you between one and four more grams of fibre, making them a satisfying snack.

Tips. Wipe away allergies

Stress is a factor in allergies as it weakens the immune system. ISTOCK

The health buzz-term of the season — the pollen vortex — is a result of the high number of tree pollens being released after their long winter of rest.

But Dr. Raymond Dattwyler thinks media and drug companies are just instilling fear. He's New York Medical College's chief of clinical immunology, allergy and rheumatology.

"It's meaningless," he says, dismissing the notion of a pollen vortex. "Every spring there are articles saying this will be the worst season ever. It's always sensationalized. March was cold, so pollen counts were low. They got higher at the end of April. They were high, but not extraordinary."

However, the doctor says the overall incidence of allergies is growing, which means the incidence of spring allergies is growing with it. Therefore, more people will have symptoms. Here are his tips for dealing with yours.

Get the right meds

Sometimes the big guns are needed. "Your doctor can help with a prescription for a steroid nasal spray," Dattwyler says.

Cut down on antibiotics

"We're changing our natural body flora and that makes you more allergic. There is too much use of antibacterial soaps and too many antibiotics prescribed," the doctor says.

Use a neti pot

"Rinsing out the nose with salt water can lessen the pollen and lower your risk," he says.

Don't stress

"Stress is bad for the immune system. The stronger the immune system, the more long-term allergies lessen," Dattwyler says.

Sun-dried tomatoes add needed punch of kapow' to steak

myfriendinfood.com

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

I find grilled steak kind of one-dimensional and in want of a punch. This drizzle adds moisture and a left hook of flavour that is a knockout.

Mixing together the primary ingredients to use as a marinade pulls double-duty. It protects the meal from creating harmful substances on the grill and adds flavour.

A quick addition of capers and sun-dried tomatoes makes a topping.

1. Mix together oil, vinegar, oregano, garlic, pepper, salt and mustard.

2. Pour half onto steak and rub into both sides, marinate for up to 24 hours in the fridge or 20 minutes on the counter.

3. Preheat grill or grill pan.

4. Grill steak for 2-4 minutes per side over high heat.

5. Meanwhile mix remaining half of oil-and-vinegar mixture with capers and drained sun dried tomatoes.

6. Spoon caper mixture over cooked steak and serve with a side salad.

Wake up the palate and eat healthy, too

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCPT
myfriendinfood.com

Sun-dried tomatoes came into their own in the '80s but they remain a killer ingredient for a reason.

They have an intense taste that wakes up the palate but they also bring with them the nutrients that a tomato is famous for.

Lycopene is an antioxidant best known for its suspected role in helping prevent prostate cancer.

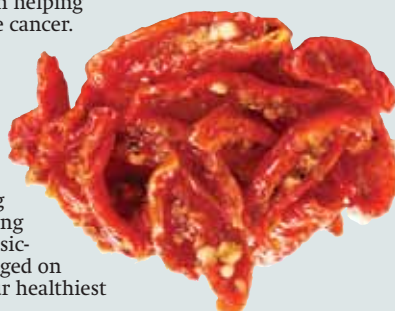

But it's also been studied for its help in preventing or treating inflammation, age-related eye disease and lung conditions. Buying the tomatoes de-seeded and packaged on their own is your healthiest option; they simply require plumping in hot water for 30 minutes or so before use.

The easiest choice though is to buy them in oil, drain and chop them into salads, on pizza, into any Mediterranean rice or pasta dish.

Don't toss the oil that the tomatoes come in, though! It is highly flavoured and ready to be used in salad dressings or bread dips.

Brandon Saad and Bryan Bickell scored and Corey Crawford stopped 16 shots for the Blackhawks, who didn't get rolling until they trailed 4-0 late in the second period.

One year after Los Angeles lost the conference finals in five games to Chicago, the Kings have their own chance to close it out in five.

Game 5 is Wednesday in Chicago.

Tanner Pearson added an empty-net goal for the Kings, who have been to the NHL finals just twice in franchise history, winning their only title in 2012.

Chicago's power play went 0-for-3 Monday, dropping to 1-for-24 (4.17 per cent) on the road in the post-season.

Chicago in Game 3, they won again at Staples Center by scoring three goals on six shots in the first 16 minutes, capping an incredible three-game offensive performance by the lowest-scoring NHL team to make the post-season.

Price back on ice, but won't play yet

Injured Montreal Canadiens goaltender Carey Price took a light skate before the team's optional practice on Monday.

The Canadian Olympic team gold medallist has been out with a suspected right-knee injury since the second period of Game 1 of the NHL Eastern Conference final.

Price skated for about 20 minutes, without his goaltending equipment, well ahead of the team's optional practice.

He is not expected back until at least the start of the Stanley Cup final.

The Canadiens trail New York 3-1 in the best-of-seven conference final and will attempt to stave off elimination when they play host to the Rangers on Tuesday night.

Trotz lands on his feet in Washington

The Washington Capitals promoted Brian MacLellan to general manager and hired former Nashville Predators coach Barry Trotz on Monday.

MacLellan, who spent seven seasons as assistant GM, replaces George McPhee, whose contract was not renewed after 17 seasons with the Capitals. MacLellan will also get the title of senior vice-president.

Trotz was the Predators' coach for 15 seasons before being dropped from the job in April. In Washington, he takes over for Adam Oates, who was fired with a season left on his three-year deal.

Pacers proving they can't hang with the Heat

NBA playoffs. Miami a win away from fourth straight trip to Finals

LeBron James had 32 points and 10 rebounds, Chris Bosh added 25 points and the Miami Heat moved one win away from a return trip to the NBA Finals with a 102-90 win over the Indiana Pacers on Monday night.

Dwyane Wade scored 15 points for the Heat, who have won three of the first four games in the Eastern Conference finals. They can win the East for a fourth straight season with a win at Indiana on Wednesday night.

Miami led wire-to-wire, opening up as much as a 23-point lead in the final quarter.

Paul George scored 23 points and David West added 20 points and 12 rebounds for the Pacers, who got 15 points from George Hill. But Lance Stephenson was held to nine and Roy Hibbert was scoreless in 22 minutes for Indiana.

The Pacers won two elimination games in the first round against Atlanta, and need to win three more if their year-long plan of topping Miami as kings of the East is going to become reality.

The odds are obviously stacked against them. When holding a 3-1 lead, Miami is 8-0 in Game 5s over the past four post-seasons.

The fight isn't over.

But it was awfully one-sided for long stretches of Game 4.

Miami outscored Indiana

31-20 in the third quarter and increased the lead to 23 in the fourth before the Pacers used a 15-3 run to make things somewhat interesting.

Hunter-Reay sees $2.5M payday

Ryan Hunter-Reay's narrow Indianapolis 500 win brought him a $2.49-million payday.

The overall purse was $14.23 million. The winnings were announced Monday night.

Hunter-Reay edged Helio Castroneves by 0.060 seconds Sunday in the second-closest margin of victory in the history of the race. He became the first American to win the Indy 500 since Sam Hornish Jr. in 2006.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

There is no point trying to predict what will happen over the next few days. Just stay calm and be ready to act when big events happen.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

You need to be a bit more serious about your cash flow situation. Tomorrow's new moon will make it clear where and how savings need to be made. No more shopping sprees for you — for now.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

With a powerful new moon in your sign over the next three days there is no way you can go wrong — and even if you do go wrong it will somehow turn out right. Aim for the sky.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

What you decide over the next few weeks, and especially over the next few days, will form the basis of your reality for the coming year. Find a quiet place where you can be alone with your thoughts.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Friendships and group activities are highlighted today and all week, so get out and mix with all sorts of people — every one of them will have something to teach you.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

If you are in any way dissatisfied with your lot, now is the time to do something about it. The approaching new moon means that changes are good for you, especially those to do with your career.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

It will feel as if a great weight has been lifted from your shoulders today. Money worries, especially, will begin to fade and you can start having fun again.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The upcoming new moon will give you the motivation and energy you need to make a start on a project you have been flirting with for weeks, months, maybe even years.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Anything of a one-to-one nature, be it personal, professional or financial, can be changed for the better over the next few days. Romance is especially well starred.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Even you can recognize that certain ways of doing things are not working as well as they should. It's time to push your ego to one side and admit that changes are needed.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The approaching new moon encourages you to believe that you can get away with anything. If you act as if it is true, you will no doubt do something amazing.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Over the next two or three days you will get the opportunity to find out why loved ones are so uptight. Once you know that it will be quite easy to restore harmony.
